

5 May 2017

Dear Stakeholder

Today we announced that our shareholders have accepted the offer from ChemChina and that the transaction will close later this month. I want to take this opportunity to re-emphasize that this will not change anything for our customers, business partners and employees. Syngenta remains Syngenta. Our operational independence will be preserved and the company will continue to be headquartered in Switzerland.

In ChemChina, we have a long term stable owner who shares our strategic and long-term vision, as well as our commitment to agriculture and farmers worldwide. ChemChina is committed to supporting Syngenta's growth, product offering and reach. With their backing we will build on our leading capabilities by investing more in innovation and in collaborations to complement our base business.

Today's announcement ensures continued choice and competition within a sector which is currently undergoing major consolidation. ChemChina is committed to maintaining a high level of R&D investment and to the continuation of The Good Growth Plan, which contains our commitments to improving agricultural sustainability.

We look forward to continuing our relationship with you and to continuing to serve the communities in which we operate.

Kind regards

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Antonie Delpont", with a stylized flourish at the end.

Antonie Delpont
Managing Director