What's new this year?

There are major changes to the categories and criteria this year. See below:

Innovation awards: The Innovation Category has greater emphasis on 'innovation'. The Research for Innovation Awards is now the 'Awards for Innovations and their research and/or development'.

Research categories – no PhD required: All research categories are now open to anyone experienced in research. We have also strengthened the focus on further development of outputs towards innovations.

Suggestions for candidates: An open call to the public for nominations remains the primary process for nominations. However, if someone wants to suggest a person who should be nominated, please email suggestions to enquiries@nstf.co.za by 11 December 2017, with a brief explanation and their details. In this case, please don't fill in the registration form.

Special Annual Theme Award: The NSTF's special annual theme award this year is for a contribution to SET and innovation towards Sustainable Energy for All. This aligns to the International Decade of Sustainable Energy for All (2014-2024) declared by the United Nations.
